ON THE COVER:

FRONT PANEL:

Mike Wick recounts a joke as Roger Niemeyer counts to make sure he's serving a perfect bratwurst. In one of the school's best kept secrets, students from Mrs. Jean Kirk's Foods class enjoy some rare nice days for an outdoor barbecue on the "patio" hidden behind the Family and Consumer Sciences rooms. The students include Mike Stomate, Mike Wick, Keith Krueger, Gail Micholski, Alisso Wosyliw, Shannon McLaughlin, and Roger Niemeyer.

BACK PANEL / TOP:

First-year athletic director Doug James could count on one thing: everything changes. From rescheduling rained-out games to replacing officials who cancelled at the last minute, James mastered the job with grace, intensity, and commitment.

BACK PANEL / MIDDLE:

Counting down the last few steps to the finish line, Chris Montel completes his run at the Lemon Lake sectionals. The speedy senior monoged to make it all the way to the semistate cross country meet and set school records in track.

BACK PANEL / BOTTOM:

Circling countless times, Christine Wojvoda and Becky Van Lear wrap Michelle Borger in the Toilet Paper Game during Spirit Week. The games produced countless memories as the seniors squeezed out a narrow win.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 million to 12.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased from 4.5 million to 6.5 million (Office of National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of older people in the community. The Department of Health (1999) has published a strategy for older people, which sets out a vision for the future of older people's health and social care. The strategy is based on the following principles:

- Older people should be able to live independently in their own homes for as long as possible.
- Older people should be able to access the services and support they need to live well.
- Older people should be able to participate in decisions about their care and support.
- Older people should be able to live in a safe and secure environment.

The strategy also sets out a number of key objectives for the future, including:

- To reduce the number of older people who are in care homes.
- To improve the quality of care and support for older people.
- To ensure that older people have access to the services and support they need to live well.
- To ensure that older people are able to participate in decisions about their care and support.

The strategy is a key document for the future of older people's health and social care in the UK. It sets out a vision for the future and provides a framework for the development of policies and services.

Counting on a senior victory, Danielle Devine, Andrea Ward, and Stephanie Quinn raise the level of excitement at Spirit Games.

we're ready to recount

RECOUNT (n): an additional (usually a second) count; especially of the votes in a close election. (www.dictionary.com) Election recount; political or popular? The 2000 Presidential election prompted this very question. With recount upon recount, 33 days after the November 4 election we finally had a president-elect. That also prompted the question, "What is worth recounting?"

RECOUNT (v): narrate or give a detailed account of; "tell what happened." (www.dictionary.com) Throughout the school year bitter and sweet things took place and the yearbook is expected to cover roughly all of them for future reference. With the start of the bowling team, students with a natural talent to bowl finally had the chance to show it off. In the team's first season, Lynn Savickas earned a trip to regionals. What a start!

And what about the boys' varsity basketball team? Even though they didn't get a win, they were just a few points away from the sectional championship game.

Unfortunately, the recount included some sad changes. The sudden and tragic death of Lindsay Parks on November 25 took everyone by surprise, and math teacher Barbara Williams finally lost her long battle with cancer on December 3.

Then there were the odd things, making laughter inevitable. When juniors took the ASVAB, who could forget the instructor? "She was very strict, and the way she had the questions memorized was kinda freaky. No normal person memorizes questions to tests," Danielle Eiermann said. Her attitude would have brought tears to the fiercest drill instructor's eyes. We were amused.

Tony Braner
throws his arms into the air after punting a football for fun at the cross country regionals. His friends and sister, Melissa, a runner on the team, could always count on his lively moral support.

AT THE END of the cross country regionals at Lemon Lake, Rich Dobin recounts the race and gets his time from Mr. Kowalczyk. "It was a hard race," Rich said, "but I finished it."

NO NEED TO WORRY about counting measures, as Marty Law keeps the pep band tempo. A talented drummer, he replaced Bernard Andres who moved in 2000. Ironically, Marty, had to move in mid-year.

IT WASN'T EXACTLY a day for counting calories in Mrs. Jean Kirk's fifth-hour class as her aide, April Shalvis, celebrates Mardi Gras with homemade king cake.

RECALLING THE FALL One of the student organizations brings a "scare" to the community with the activity in Cedar Lake's Chamber of Commerce fall decorating competition.

"THE NUTCRACKER" plays in countless performances throughout the holiday season. Adam Suarez, one of Mrs. Lonnie Grant's "friend" students, had the opportunity to interact with Edward Dornings of the Indiana Ballet Theatre in Northway, Indiana after the show.

GLYN KENZIE Inspired by Goddard Heights' coach, Kenzie, "The basketball player" was inspired to play with the team. Kenzie, who was a member of the team, was a member of the team.

we'll milk it to the end

With everyone's eyes on him, junior Sean Meehan attempted the impossible. During lunch Josh Arflin dared him to drink an entire gallon of milk. Being Sean Meehan, he felt he had a certain reputation to uphold and accepted the dare. In spite of his full-blown attempt to drink the milk, science took full swing. For some reason, the human body cannot digest an entire gallon of milk and whatever Sean drank came right back up. "Tyra Banks said in her 'Got Milk?' ad that she only dates guys that drink milk. I thought this would increase my chances," Meehan said. "Furthermore, the aliens that live inside me need milk to run their space ship so that they can return to their home planet, Spurbengerg."

The phrase, "Time flies when you're having fun," fell right into place here. Even though students might say they dislike school, it was a place to learn and rendezvous with friends countless times. After all, when we leave the halls of Hanover, we will probably find the outside world is not as understanding. "I don't really know, it's just one of those things in life we're just going to have to experience," Adam Walker said. You can count on that—again and again and again.

making life COUNT

From the moment of its late-summer conception, the year spawned a rash of surprises and delights. It wasn't just the routine gut check of the tardy bell or curling up in a fetal position on test day. No, it meant every day brought with it something to special recall; something to recount.

VARIETY is the spice of life and school-color hair and make-up for Spirit Week gives sophomore Jennifer Burroughs plenty of that. Students who dressed up earned Spirit Jug points for their class, which the senior class won (again).

COUNTLESS passes through clothing and limbs makes the Spoon Game tricky to follow. The object of the game was to be the first class to pass a spoon attached to string through a line of classmates. The seniors won this event, too.

another Fancy dance

A short evening with an endless line for pictures made for a limited edition of memories

"Homecoming Dance was fun but it would have been better if it was longer," senior Nagisa Banks said.

"Two hours is not enough time to dance, get pictures, and do the court. Overall, I had a really good time."

Beautiful decorations, romantically dimmed lights, and one really long line for pictures. Senior Josh Davis said, "We basically had to stand in line the entire dance; which ruined a lot of people's night."

The music was DJed by Joe Panziano and John Sabaitis. Everyone had his or her opinions about the music. Junior Anna Law said, "...after I dragged a few people out on the dance floor it was pretty cool." Robyn Arwood agreed, "...not everybody listens to Ricky Martin...it ended up being an ok dance." In reality, though, most people did like the music.

Royalty for the December 1 festivities included freshmen Jaclyn Kienzle and Brandon Hegg, sophomores Melissa Braner and Nick Urena, juniors Jamie Jenkins and Adam Van Gorp. Queen and King were Kelly Garrett and Roger Niemeyer. Garrett said, "I was really excited because I didn't think that I had a chance to win." Niemeyer noted, "I was very surprised. It made it even better being crowned by my older brother, I couldn't have been happier."

Senior Josh Davis and junior Anna Law were the first to dance to the song "Bugs" by the band The Roots. They were the only couple to dance to the song.

socialization

The homecoming dance is a great time for students to socialize and have fun. It's a chance for everyone to meet new people and enjoy the night.

seniors dominate

again

Momentum built in the juniors' bid to unseat the seniors' stranglehold on the Spirit Jug until one senior literally had an unlucky break

Tony Braner literally took one for the team. As a senior member of the Flipper Race team, he broke both bones on his left arm and the big toe on his right foot. Still, he had enough strength to make it to the dance later that night. After a short break to see if he was all right, he made a statement to the senior class, "Go Seniors." His words inspired the seniors, who took this personally and never looked back.

Early on, the juniors racked up first place points. After Braner's injury, however, the seniors took first place in every remaining event. In the end, the seniors beat the juniors by seven points.

The funniest thing to watch was the tug-of-war game between the freshmen and seniors. The freshmen knew they were outnumbered from the beginning. After the seniors were just about ready to beat them, the freshmen sent in their reserves to counter against the seniors. The seniors retaliated and the freshmen sent everyone they had on the attack. The seniors held their ground. Then they finally let go, sending the helpless freshmen to the floor. Both teams were disqualified, but later got a second chance.

Trash talking was the biggest thing to happen. The seniors taunted, "Go home freshmen!" Even English teacher Brett Wright felt the wrath of the AP English students shouting, "Macbeth!" —a double reference to the book and when Braner, a thespian, took his fall. Myths said that this play is cursed when called by its name and acted in a theatre-like atmosphere. Clearly, he gave new meaning to the dramatic phrase, "break a leg."

i think i can, i think i can

The seniors, not used to taking second place in this event, can only watch as juniors Jan Howe and Adam Nien Gove pull with all their might to win first place in the tug-of-war. The freshmen finished last in this game.

stringing goodness

In the "Spoon Race," seniors Nate Staley and Jerrod Martin tangle their talents by prilling a spoon attached to a string through their clothes and passing it on down the line of seven classmates.

"go home, freshmen!"

Danielle Devine spoils the latest fashion of the senior class and restarts the famous chant, "Go Home, Freshmen!" The chant was prompted by an unexpected match-up between the two classes when the juniors upset the seniors for the tug-of-war title.

Junior Miss was full of close competition and loads of fun for the senior contestants, but no one begrudged the sore-throated winner

Cedar Lake's newest Junior Miss was Brienne Sheehy. Ironically, she also won the Fitness Award even as she battled strept throat at the same time. In spite of her illness, Brienne earned the chance to compete for the state Junior Miss title, which took place in Frankfort — and preferably without an infection.

Some contestants pointed out the annual program wasn't actually a pageant, but a way to compete for scholarships. Other award winners included Kristy Brownd, Spirit of Junior Miss; Jillian Janicki, second runner-up; Becky Scherer, Performing Arts; Kelly Garrett, first runner-up; Lindsay Shelby, Scholastic Achievement; Christine Wajvoda, Creative Arts; and Rebecca VanLear, Presence & Appearance and Judge's Interview winner.

"You get to know more about the girls in your grade," Leslee Kaper recalled. According to Sheehy, "My favorite moment (of Junior Miss) was Kirby (Heidel) at the sleepover."

Junior Miss held barrels of fun for the competitors whether they won or not. All of the contestants said they were very excited about the competition. And when asked what she would have changed about the competition, Sheehy replied, "I would have chosen not to have strept throat." Fair enough.

Cashing in on spare time—when we could find it

After school, teens went home to energize with their hobbies and free time. Students with after-school hobbies kept busy until school commenced again. Students had plenty to do each and every day whether it was participating in a sport, special interest, or just hanging out with friends. Some had to juggle school five days a week and negotiate a schedule of extracurricular activities, clubs, sports, jobs, and a spare moment or two. When possible, we squeezed in a few cheap thrills.

"I tried to find time to skateboard down the street when I got home after school," senior Eric Lambert said. But some were more sedate. "My favorite hobby that I did everyday after school was going on the Internet and chatting with my friends," senior Matt Wiarda said.

For those who had to budget money as well as time, there was work at the restaurants in town, department stores at the mall, or the local theater.

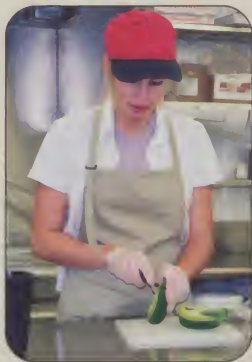

Whether students collected sports cards, played video games, surfed the Internet, chatted with friends, or collected those lovable beanie babies that everyone just had to have starting a few years back.

"I loved to collect Star Wars memorabilia because that is my favorite movie of all time," senior Jeff Skorupa noted. A highly personal way to spend some time, hobbies became a true labor of love.

Coch Ron Szanyi defects to the other side as the Chicago Bears invade the Wildcat Den in an evening of fun and fund raising

Donning a Bear's jersey, Coach Ron Szanyi was introduced along with Marty Booker, Roosevelt Colvin, Marlin Barnes, and Otis Wilson as the faculty took on the Chicago Bears in basketball. Szanyi filled in for Bryan Robinson, who apparently couldn't find the school.

The game was staged as a fund-raising event for the freshman class. When Army staff sergeant Aaron Boetsch heard about the game, he wanted to find some way of participating. Besides playing in the game, refereeing it would be the next best thing. Sgt. Boetsch got that exact duty, along with Cedar Lake Police Officer Jerry Smith.

"The referees did a pretty good job keeping the game fun," JV coach Mike Steele said. They realized that the whole event was for the fans and they did as little as possible to mess it up. They made a few bad calls, but then again, I've never seen a good referee before."

With time running out in the fourth quarter, the faculty needed to do something drastic or suffer the same fate as the boys' varsity basketball team. When the referees allowed Greg Whitacre to become the sixth man on the court, the entire Hanover staff cleared the bench and the Bears faced a multitude of talent. Ranging from Steele's vertical leaps to Mrs. Maggie Hekloen's agility, the staff was able to rack up a few more points. However, when the 10 minutes were up, the Bears, along with Szanyi, came out on top, 92-75.

"The Hanover staff and coaches who participated had a blast," freshman class sponsor Wendy Obrenski said. The crowd did, too.

The juniors set the stage and made it the highlight of the seniors' year, thanks to lots of balloons, noise makers and plain old hard work

With continuous noise from the fire alarm (caused by the DJ's fog machine), music from the DJ booth, and chatter, prom night was spectacular. Everyone danced, talked, and ate all night long. Class co-sponsors Collen Darnell and Lisa Koester managed to make it all look sparkly.

About the middle of the dance, the Sound Factory DJ asked a couple of guys to wear some hats and perform the Village People's "YMCA" in front of everyone. And typical of the guys from Hanover, they would do anything. They got ready and when the song came on, they marched in proudly and ready to dance. There was an uproar of laughing and hollering, but it turned out to be a pretty good idea.

"I'd like to thank the juniors for a great prom," Rich Dobin said. "It was sweet and I had fun." He was part of the "YMCA" number as well as Mike Wick, Don Kors, Jon Howe, Brian "Bugs" Bugajski, Eric Hegg, and some guests from other schools.

In keeping with some tradition, though, the night was romantic and elegant. Couples enjoyed the night of dancing and gazing into each other's eyes while everyone partied into the night.

While only about 50 couples attended last year's prom, this year there were more than double that number. Special guests included Principal and Mrs. Joseph Fetty, Assistant Principal and Mrs. Douglas Justus, as well as Joy McColley, Steven Landis, and Laura Marzotto, who chaperoned.

step By step,

inch by inch

Nothing else took this much patience, but the day finally arrived when the Class of 2001 could take that very large step and walk into the real world.

Since their first days of school, students dreamed of the day when they would graduate and leave school for good. The dreams, though, couldn't really predict the future.

When graduation rolled around student emotions were mixed. Some were glad while others could not help but shed a few tears. However, as their final hours passed at Hanover some remained unsure about leaving the secure halls and venturing out into a world where the economy had started to shrink.

Nearly every senior had some kind of plans for after high school. Of course there were the numerous graduation parties scattered throughout the month of June. But everyone had to have a long-term plan. Whether it was starting all over again at college, enlisting in the military, or entering the work force, the training wheels were off and the next step was toward independence.

"I will have more freedom to do what I want," Adam Walker said. "Some days you have classes and some days you don't." Walker planned to attend IUN and pursue a career in conservation.

The hype for graduation began early in the year and grew as the year went on. By the Friday before graduation it all sunk in. All that remained was a quick senior breakfast and taking a group photo early in the morning. They finished with commencement rehearsal, led by co-valedictorians Jillian Gorny and Jillian Janicki, and salutatorian Lindsay Shelby.

Excitement runs through Erin Maione on graduation day. For many, the day was one of the best of their lives. It was also bittersweet as it meant leaving some friends behind. For Erin, this was a great day that she and her family will never forget.

April Shalvis on any other day didn't like having her picture taken, but today is the exception. "This is the best day of my life," she said.

Graduation is a time of celebration and reflection. It's a time to look back on the years of hard work and growth, and to look forward to the future with hope and excitement. For many students, graduation is a bittersweet moment, as they say goodbye to friends and teachers who have become a part of their lives. But it's also a time to embrace the challenges ahead and to take pride in the accomplishments that have brought them to this point.

here we come

Graduation meant new beginnings, but real world experience makes or breaks
those who are about to face the challenge of life.

During graduation many speeches were given, some lengthier than others, but they were well worth it. Principal Joseph Felty delivered a speech on success and failure in an attempt to motivate the graduates to strive to be their best. But there was fun, too. Chris Huseman and Andy Miller both wore special gowns shipped to them from Hawaii. When the graduation was completed the gym erupted in tears, laughter and endless hugs. It was a scene celebrated in countless schools across the country, but there was only one for Hanover Central's Class of 2001.

"Who I am going to miss the most about being here at Hanover for seven years (junior/high school) was spending time with my friends day in and day out," senior Chris Reh said.

Commencement wasn't quite the last obligation seniors had. The graduates had to return to school the next day to pick up their diplomas, prom photos, and some honors certificates. Still, it wasn't a very big price to pay in order to have commencement a week earlier than undergraduate dismissal.

Not everyone was happy about it, though. "It was pointless for us to come back to school for just three hours and then leave," graduate Nick Medrano said. Maybe there wasn't a great deal of education taking place, but it did provide one last time for graduates to be together before taking on the real world.

Success a hundred times over

a winning bunch

At the annual convention held in Fort Wayne, Jon Howe, Kelly Garrett, Amber Westerhoff, sponsor Mary Joan Dickson, Adrienne Shroka, and Charlie Seors celebrate their awards and honors presented for excellence in the club.

the best there was

Key Club treasurer Amber Westerhoff earns the Distinguished Club Treasurer award at the state convention for her efforts as one of the state's best Key Club treasurers.

Talk about a busy organization. With over 100 members for the first time in their history and various activities throughout the year, these members were busy every month of the year. Nearly one in four students were part of this organization.

Among the major events were Jane Ball's Haunted Gym, MDA basketball and bowling, night out in a cardboard box, and their annual banquet in Fort Wayne. In the Haunted Gym, Key Club members put on two scenes and one scary kiddie scene that they acted out for the kids at Jane Ball. That same night, they went around local neighborhoods and participated in the Trick or Treat for UNICEF sponsored by TNT.

They participated in Bowling for the Muscular Dystrophy Association (MDA) that raised a good chunk of change and helped with the basketball sales, also for MDA, which helps people who have muscular problems in their bodies.

At their yearly convention in Fort Wayne, Key Club received a Platinum award for having over 100 members. Kelly Garrett and Amber Westerhoff were named outstanding president and treasurer. Mary Joan Dickson won the distinct advisor award at the convention.

Cardboard Box Night gave members a taste of what it would be like to be homeless without a house over your head. The weather was decent and junior Adrienne Shroka said, "We had a great time at the cardboard box night out. It was a good way to help raise money, have fun, and help others, which is what Key Club is all about."

Key Club raised over $7000 and members combined for over 9000 hours of community service and meetings. They really showed what this organization can do with a little help from everybody and that proved if you put your mind to it anything was possible.

Being 'blue' can be fun after all

If seeing Blue Man Group was a number one priority, you should have joined the Art Club. On Mother's Day, club members, some parents and faculty ventured to the Briar Street Theater in Chicago to view the popular performance art show.

"We like to expose our club members to cultural activities that they might not get out side of school," sponsor Louis Greer said.

Art students also went about their annual raffle ticket sale which was the club's only way of raising money. However, when a great piece of work happened to come along, the artist jumped on the opportunity to send it to competition. Some students earned awards and cash prizes. For example, "Escaping Perfection," a painting by Jeff Skorupa, won Best of Show and a scholarship put at the sixth annual Secondary School Showcase in Valparaiso.

drawing is fun

Sitting in Mr. Greer's room, freshman Jaclyn Keinzle is engrossed in her drawing. She said she expresses her thoughts through her art.

mantel's monster

Recalling some school spirit, senior Chirs Mantel sculpted an enarmous cat leven if it really is a tiger. The paper maché model was finely detailed right down to the whiskers.

Art studios forge and refine raw talent

the glory of green

Although hard to see in black and white, Kristen Skorupa's watercolor incorporated a vast array of green hues with a splash of fiery red-orange flowers in the foreground. It was featured at the annual spring art show, juried by former Hanover art teacher Sharon Catoldi.

Between Louis Greer and Cheryl Muehlman's two art rooms, both factories for molding budding talent, students were not only prolific in generating work, they were honored with critical acclaim.

Possibly the most successful, senior Jeff Skorupa was honored extensively at a variety of local exhibits and shows. His talent even earned him top honors at Valparaiso University's prestigious annual exhibit. His sister, Kristen, followed in the family footsteps and took the award for outstanding sophomore art at Hanover's spring show. Her entry was a decorative ceramic box.

Also honored for outstanding work at the spring show were seniors Cassie Speichert, sculpture; Chris Mantel, sculpture; and Kristy Brownd, painting. Juniors included Emi Mastey, painting; Brian Strezelecki, sculpture; and Erik Mantel, sculpture. Freshman April Barnes won outstanding art honors for her watercolors, while junior Jamie Jenkins won for Outstanding Photography. Junior Heather Burkhardt and freshman Liz Bilinski won recognition at areas shows, too.

The wait is finally over for these new inductees of the National Honor Society. They were chosen by the inductee staff for their hard work and leadership.

Rollin' in the dough(nuts)

At the beginning of the year, Honor Society decided they wanted to do something different instead of selling candy for their fund-raiser. Vice president Jillian Janicki suggested they sell Krispy Kreme® doughnuts. It was a good move.

This idea turned into reality in March when the honor society sold their doughnuts to everybody around town. They bought them like they had never eaten anything in their whole lives. Some people had already tried these doughnuts at distant Krispy Kreme® restaurants, while others were sold on the pastries by word of mouth alone. Box after box of the glazed treats flew out the door. "I simply loved these doughnuts!" junior Mike Case explained. The members of honor society sold about 9,000 doughnuts and raised about $1,900 profit for their organization. More importantly, this was a better fund-raiser than the candy sales which normally generated about $1,000 profit.

The National Honor Society also introduced a new sponsor, Millie Postma, to the group. The veteran teacher brought years of teaching and counselling experience to the table as an added benefit to the organization.

Recounting the days in small ways

"Everyday is fun-filled, I can't remember a day that has been boring," Cybercat staff member Lauren Pawlak said of the online news staff experience. Besides reporting, the staff knew how to have fun. From field trips to eating cake, the staff also maintained an up-to-date web site. Advising others who considered joining, Elizabeth Gonsiorowski commented, "Do it! It's fun!"

A tiny yearbook staff faced several obstacles, but they were effective. With only five rookies and one returnee, the staff had to learn the production processes, complete work on the 2000 Key, and create the 2001 Key all at the same time.

Still, they enjoyed the challenge. Staffers brought CDs everyday and the room was filled with music as well as intense work. "Yearbook is fun, but I get picked on by the boys who make up the rest of the class," Andrea Burandt said.

"Yearbook is challenging, but fun. We constantly have to turn things in on time. If not, people will fall behind."

Freshman Megan Myers doodles on her book instead of paying attention during class. "Listening to lectures are really boring," she said, adding that she can't wait to be a senior and graduate from school.

Senior Ryan Otterman dresses up as Lady Macbeth for Mr. Wright, the A.P. English teacher. Wright had his kids perform skits from the "forbidden" play in class.

Curse of Macbeth hovers around Hanover

All year Macbeth's curse seemed to pull at Hanover one way or another. Senior Tony Braner broke his arm at Spirit Games only a few days after uttering the tragic character's name. Then the boys' varsity basketball team suffered from some kind of curse on them. Cleansing rituals were in order. "I felt retarded," senior Ryan Otterman said of having to dress in drag to end the madness, "but I had to do it so I could pass the class and graduate. Who wants to stay in school any longer than they have to? I want to get to IU Bloomington as fast as I can to get a job and make some fast cash." Maybe it wasn't as silly as he thought, but the girls seemed to have better luck during the school year. Lifting the curse didn't require bringing in a goat to walk around the school like the Chicago Cubs tried. Of course, the curse on the Cubs and the basketball team may have been stronger than even Shakespeare could conjure up.

"When things started happening, I got a little worried."

last-minute magic

Heather Stonizeski and Loren Royburn cram really hard for a test since they decided to go out the night before. "I like studying government," Heather said, "it's fun."

studying hard

"This summer course (government) is great because you have more time to spend on one class," Brion Strzelecki said as he checked his notes for a quiz

don't fall asleep

The thing that Ron Schuitema doesn't like about summer classes is that, "it's keeping me from sleeping in and working." He said he liked the government class, though, because "it's easier to study and work on one class a day." A number of students remarked they liked the casual atmosphere, though they usually did sit in chairs in classrooms.

Popular with students looking to squeeze an extra class into their limited schedules, as well as for remediation, Ann Thompson's summer government class attracts Jessica Middleton and Andrew Couwenhoven.

Summer school offers another credit check

While most students in summer school don't like waking up in the morning and coming to school, most of them didn't mind the classes. They appreciated the time that the teachers gave and the extra time they had to work.

"I think that it is easier to learn in summer school," Megan McGovern said, "because you have as long as you need to learn the material."

Students took the classes because they needed credit, had to meet ISTEP+ requirements, or just because their parents made them. Another reason some students took summer classes was because they ended after weeks instead of months. While they met for up to three hours a day, students said they received more one-on-one attention in the classroom.

Improving math skills

Stepping away from his own computer, Jeff Starke coaches Megan McGovern and Aaron Hughes on the school's A+ software program. The program enhances skills in math and English. "I took the summer math class because I need some credits," Jeff noted.

baby bites

In the advanced Foods class, seniors Keith Krueger and Mike Wick search for a plastic baby inside their piece of Mardi Gras King cake. By tradition, the first to find the babies are crowned and then throw the next year's celebration. Each student group made different dishes to celebrate the annual Mardi Gras festival.

take a bite

"The information in all the family and consumer science classes offered can be used throughout one's lifetime," Mrs. Jean Kay said. "I feel these are important life skills." The veteran educator taught a variety of courses, including nutrition and wellness, advanced child development, parenting, advanced clothing and design, consumer economics, housing, orientation and life and careers, and interpersonal relationships.

just chillin'

While testing the food everyone made, Mike Wick, Keith Krueger, Gail Michalski, and April Shalvis talk and joke around for a while. Krueger noted, "My foods class was the best class that I had all year, with the field trips and all the cooking fifth hour."

is it edible?

Would you bend over and smell food if you didn't know what it was? Seniors Mike Stamate and Roger Niemeyer try exotic specialties such as gumbo, a Cajun main dish.

During the Halloween Kid's Day, Rachelle Cavender keeps company with two-year-old BranDee Amber Adam, who is disguised as a lady bug.

Not just kidding around

Mardi Gras wasn't the only focal point of Mrs. Jean Kirk's classes. She also taught high school students about young children and their emotional and physical needs. "I have nine different preps throughout the school year. At times, this can be overwhelming yet challenging," she said. But for high school students to have hands-on experience, her classes planned story, craft, and snack time for various "Kids Days." Kids Day brought children from infants to seven years of age into the classroom to participate in the activities planned by the high school students. Rachelle Cavender said, "The class was very informative. It prepared me a lot for motherhood."

"We had many good times and great learning experiences (in cooking)."

Students don't let problems 'snowball'

Senior Jillian Janicki, president of Snowball, observed, "Snowball's main objective was to teach students to make positive decisions and to be uplifting role models." Jillian was an active member of Snowball since her freshman year.

Students in the organization tried to teach other students in school about drug and alcohol prevention. They helped the community spread the word and enlisted people to join their main objective.

Snowball was involved in various activities, including events such as "Kick Butts Day," Red Ribbon Week, The Great American Smoke Out, 3-D Week, and Snowflurry. They also hung posters around the hallways and handed out information on drug and alcohol prevention during lunch hours.

At Snowflurry they taught younger students about drug and alcohol prevention. Staff members distributed "warm fuzzies," strips of yarn for students to give to others as a message of caring. That made everyone feel real good about themselves. They explored in detail why they shouldn't do drugs or drink alcohol. They also gave a tour of the school to potential students in the near future. Junior Andrew Couwenhoven noted, "I really enjoyed the interaction with the younger students so they can understand that it's not good to be doing drugs and alcohol."

Band takes third north of the border

Leaving on two buses at 11:00 at night, most of the students slept most of the ride. In Toronto, the band students visited two malls, Parliament, the Casa Loma Castle, the CN tower, and other tourist attractions. The day after arriving in Toronto, the band competed in the music festival at York University where they received a rating of good and placed third.

Not only did the band perform well at the festival, the members had lots of fun. With more goods than bads, the whole trip was a success and showed that director John Gorball's band was a talented group of students.

"The trip was excellent, we saw many neat things in a short amount of time, and we had a lot of fun," Gorball commented.

taking a little break

At every band concert director John Gorball takes time to tell the audience the name of the next number. This actually served two purposes. It kept the audience's attention and it gave the band a quick break to catch their breath.

editor's note

A special thanks goes out to all of the Bond Boosters who worked so hard to make the Toronto trip happen. Without their efforts and support, this trip would not have been possible.

Tunes and tears for all the years

Seniors in show choir were allowed to get their caps and gowns early just for Spec. That simply meant they cried a little sooner. As the show choir's annual May spectacular neared, they rehearsed to become superheroes and graduates.

The concert choir visited Jane Ball Elementary and involved the kids with their songs. The boys staged, "Next to Loving, I Like Fighting," while the girls sang, "You Don't Own Me." The show also featured soloists Brett Arwood, Josh Pagel, Charles Pendleton, David Binder, Andrea Stam-Burandt, Lisa Grey, Stephanie Geraci, Rachelle Graham, Jennifer Matton, and Jena Osting.

In their final performance, senior choir members sang, "Time of Your Life" at commencement, wrenching tears from the crowd.

Both choirs were challenged with new songs, new people, new voices, and a new year. The madrigals, who sang Old English numbers, performed at only two concerts, but traveled to contest and earned a second.

slip-slidin' away

As he attempts a rebound, freshman Cory Malon misjudges the ball as it slips off his hands. Skill and technique wasn't always as important as winning in gym class.

Pushing the limit, senior Chris Huseman shows that anyone can do it with a little effort. All phys ed students learned proper weightlifting technique in class.

A tougher kind of Playstation

Health and Physical education did not only encourage activity and physical strength, it also emphasized maintaining good conditioning, the right way to eat and the right way to exercise. Throughout the year instructors Bonnie Beamer and Carol Grady helped teenagers get the right information. Boys' teacher Ron Szanyi helped kids to keep in shape and get them away from the lure of PlayStation 2. Mr. Szanyi not only taught each activity, he also took part in the class giving a hands on experience. His students said they enjoyed the days when he went out and played, especially during pinball, because they got to hit their teacher with a volleyball. ## Exploring a world of culture and cuisine

French Club finally had a rival in an eclectic group of students who formed a semi-official Spanish club. One thing both groups had in common was their love of travel and eating. French teacher Connie Gramit escorted her students to Europe and Quebec, Canada. Spanish teacher Steve Gustas took his students on an eight-day tour of Spain. They stopped in Madrid, Seville, Grenada, and Malaga. Both groups sampled authentic foods in and out of their classrooms. From Cinco de Mayo to Bastille Day, these groups never went hungry.

But being in a foreign language class wasn't just about getting the opportunity to travel and dine. Students in both classes were hungry to learn about their "adopted" country's geography, politics, traditions, art forms, and way of life.

Would a moment to rethink, help?

Being wise did have its advantages. The academic teams competed in the Indiana Academic Superbowl at Wheeler on April 17. Two of the five teams performed better than expected and both achieved something new at the competition. David Binder, Paul Metz, and Chris Parker formed the entire English team and pulled off a first-place finish—a first for Hanover. The Fine Arts team also accomplished a first: they left with a solid second place.

In an annual tradition juniors ventured to the back gym to take place in the Reality Store, an event to help prepare them for life. Students began by deciding what kind of career they wanted to pursue and then were assigned a monthly salary. Students were then required to move among stations and balance their earnings, make life decisions, or go bankrupt. And you thought “Survival” was tough.

Gretchen Govert gives a smile indicating that, relatively speaking, she enjoys her time on the table. Donors gave a pint of blood and council members assisted the donors off the tables, there's more where that came from

"I like donating blood," LesLee Koper said, "I would do it all of the time if I could. It's kinda fun." Dozens of others agreed as the Heartland Blood Services collected almost 50 pints.

nervous moments

Not looking very excited about donating, Kristy Brown lays perfectly still on the table in the hope that nothing will go wrong with the procedure. It didn't.

A needle in the finger isn't as bad as one in your arm for ten minutes. But Gretchen Govert knows it's all part of the process of donating for the council's blood drive.

Improving the quality of life

"I had no problem with giving blood, it was kinda fun," Adam Van Gorp said. "I will definitely have no problem doing it again next year. In fact, I am looking forward to it." He wasn't the only student to feel this way while taking part in the student council's annual blood drive. A variety of people including students, teachers, and community members came to help.

In addition to the blood drive, student council organized school events such as Spirit Week, Homecoming, and several dances. Every grade in the high school was represented in the organization, which often labored behind the scenes to improve the quality of life.

It pays to follow the instructions

It is the sheet of paper that is included with almost anything that needed to be assembled. They were called instructions, and in spite of the testosterone-driven instinct to toss them into the trash, it was usually a good idea to keep them on hand. Besides, translating the Japanese to English descriptions could be fun.

Oral instructions were just as important as written directions. They had to be remembered or written down in order to refer back to them. While constructing their model cars, students repeatedly referred to the written instructions or to the knowledge of veteran teacher Lee Johnson, in his first year on Hanover's faculty.

If instructions weren't followed, the finished product didn't work right or worse, was unsafe. With luck, local Ford Motor Company engineers took Mr. Lee's class.

Experiment in frustration

Science was one of the best classes you could have. It was an opportunity to experience labs every week that demonstrated problems in real life experiments. However, students were challenged with classroom glitches as well.

As science classes started to use brand-new laptops for the first time, difficulties with the programs caused frustration and people became bored with the process. Veteran teachers prepared alternative approaches. Junior Adam Koskela said, "Without Mr. Krol, I don't know where I would be in this world."

At the science fair junior Greg Webb won the high school gold medal for his project, "Is Coordination Affected Due To Lack of Sleep?" Webb said his idea came from kids complaining about their poor performance because of lack of sleep. His sleep study was just one of a three-part project, which included the second place project exhibited by Chris Parker, and the honorable mention project by Paul Metz.

All three projects involved sleep deprivation and how it affects the human body. They differed in their focus. While Webb's project dealt with coordination, Parker's studied memory, and Metz concentrated on basic knowledge. The tag-team effort earned the trio top honors, not to mention a good night's sleep.

In "Barbecuing Hamlet," senior Jillian Janicki plays the very witty secretary. The crowd laughed loudly, not to mention Jason Metz and Becky Scherer.

Acting like professionals

Led by Mr. Steve Gustas, the drama club presented two shows. The first, a comedy entitled, "Barbecuing Hamlet," portrayed Brienne Sheehy as the new director of a local theater troupe who is forced to work with a collection of bad actors trying to stage "Hamlet" in their western town. As the hook, the play included a barbecue after each play within a play.

The thespians also tackled "The Pirates of Penzance." It featured Eric Yukon as Frederic, an apprentice pirate, and Danielle Huffanagle as Mabel, his love interest. She was one of Major General Stanley's (Jeremy Deenik) many daughters and she fell in love with Frederic. Other roles included Brian Bugajski as the Pirate King, and Paul Metz as the sergeant of the guard. Possibly the most complex production ever staged by Hanover thespians, the tricky choreography and vocals didn't faze the ambitious group after hours of intense practice.

"(Mr.) Gustas has done a fantastic job of learning and helping. I'm happy to have him as a director."

—Elizabeth Gonsiorowski, following the final performance of "Barbecuing Hamlet".

0 the numbers Game

Stats...records...timeouts...line-ups...injuries. Pick any facet of sports and the numbers add up. Wildcat athletes and fans rode the rollercoaster of emotion from ultimate victory to utter despair. But performance was only part of the equation—every school had that. These Class 2A performers brought their best game and they brought it in numbers.

THE NUMBER OF MINUTES junior varsity players log amounts to experience that can't be taught. Junior guard Adam Itczak doesn't waste his minutes in bringing the ball up the court against PCC rival, Morgan Township.

PICK A NUMBER Even a program made it tough to track all of the runners at the start of the Lemon Lake cross country sectionals. The Wildcat runners, numbers 337-342, stepped up to earn a fifth place finish and a trip to regionals. Eventually, Chris Mantel made it to semistate.

movin' on up

Trying to move up a few spots, Ashley Hayden competes at Lemon Lake. She was one of the lucky runners that did not get lost on the course.

fast finish

Thrilled, yet, exhausted, the finish line is in sight for Kelly Gorrett. During the PCC meet, Kelly ran the course in 16:04, her fastest time of the year.

it's all over

With the rest of the race behind her, sophomore Jen Montgomery reaches for her ticket stub. She helped the Lady 'Cats to an 8-1 record on the Monastery course.

taking it easy

After years of peaking at sectionals, Melissa Braner and Jen Montgomery treasure the moment as the Wildcats move on to regionals. Out of the seven team members competing at sectionals, all finished under 18 minutes.

leader of the pack

In the home stretch, Megan Vassar breaks away from the Merrillville, Lowell, and Andean runners. Fallon Mirich and Ashley Hayden bring up the rear.

The defining moment

A near-perfect season finds everyone putting their best foot forward

With nothing held back and nothing left behind, the girls' cross country team crossed the finish line winning meet after meet. Although they lost a meet early in the season, they regrouped for win after win.

It wasn't just in meets when they went for their best times. Throughout their daily practices they put forward all their might. Their practices each and every day of the week consisted of several laps around the track, the three mile loop, and speed challenging sprints to help them on the straight stretches during the race.

Dedication comes first

Kelly Garrett, a runner since she was a freshman, earned the team's best time with a 16:04 at the PCC Meet to help them win first place. Even at the beginning of the year, Garrett had her eyes set on going all the way to state. It didn't quite work out due to the team's heartbreaking loss at semi-state, but it wasn't for lack of effort. "When I came into the season, who would have thought that we could make it all the way to semi-state. I'm really proud of this team," Garrett said as she reflected on the season.

The long road to semi-state

When they finished first successfully in the season; and then having completed the PCC perfectly with a 9-0 record, the team looked poised to take on any opponent who would step in their way. The team captured first place again in the PCC meet, first place in sectionals, and finished fourth place at regionals to earn them a trip to semi-state; but when they got there, the team fell short at the finish line, but not on a solid season.

Peaks and valleys

Mantel makes it all the way to semi-state and the team follows his leadership

The sun shined, the wind blew, and the clouds hung overhead signifying that cross-country season was about to begin. Sweat poured down opponent's faces just before the gun went off and everyone knew it was time again to get serious. The team struggled along the way, but made it all the way to regionals. The team barely missed an opportunity to go to semi-state for the first time in a few years, but Chris Mantel did make it and placed 90th in the state.

Heart of the team

No one could stop the best runner, Chris Mantel, who earned All-PCC, All-Regional, and the Most Valuable Runner awards. He also made semi-state which was a huge accomplishment for him. "When the season started, I had a feeling that it was going to be an exciting year," he said.

Survival of the fittest

Cross country runners went through a vigorous workout each and every day. They practiced whether it was rain, shine, and even snow. Their hard work during the tough times prompted Adam Itczak to say, "I think that if we decided to cancel every practice for any type of weather condition, we would have never made it all the way to regionals."

triumph and tragedy

Lindsay Parks played exceptionally well that day, and all she needed was for this shot to be good. Sadly, the talented freshman passed away in a tragic accident in November.

a swing and a miss

Coach Scott Campbell watches while sophomore Rachelle Graham attempts a drive to put the ball close to the ninth hole. Unfortunately, the ball landed a little short.

taking a look

Freshman Courtney Kellman takes a little time to line up the ball. Precision and patience was very important in this game.

get in there

After looking for the best line of attack, freshman Stacy Huppenthal ignores a teammate's shadow to sink the putt. Her concentration paid off as she sank the shot.

girls' golf

playing the short game

On her second swing of the match, Amanda Koeling swings fiercely to put the ball on to the green, or at least somewhere close by. As luck would have it, the ball actually landed about 10 feet away from where she was standing.

Hitting the greens

The girls' team showed some promise and proved to be a contender

Whether the greens were fast or slow, the girls' golf team had another successful year, going just over .500 for the season. They improved in every match to become one of the elite teams in the conference and were on their way to becoming a major contender. Coach Scott Campbell taught them the right way to drive a ball, chip it to the green, and how to sink putts in one or two shots. He also gave pointers on keeping the ball out of the hazards on the various courses they played.

"Even though most of us on the team were first year players, we still did pretty good in the conference," Megan Meyers pointed out. The team showed heart when they played and it showed.

Remember me this way

Lindsay Parks was one of the hardest workers on the golf team. Her dedication to the sport really showed and greatly helped the team win games. Coach Scott Campbell said she was one of his favorite golfers on the team. "She really earned her spot on the team and we will miss her," teammate Megan Meyers said.

on good authority

Senior Nick Medrono shows how to muscle a kill over the net. Balls deflected off the top of the net posed problems for the defense, but it wasn't a skill most players actually tried to perfect.

suspended animation

Moving to set the ball, senior Nate Stoley positions outside attacker Bobby Ostrowski for a menacing spike. Bobby's leaping ability and quick arm motion made him an effective offensive weapon.

return to sender

Junior Keith Buikemo reaches back in an eager attempt to swat down the oncoming ball. With his dominating height of 6' 3", Keith was able to score a point with his punishing spike.

bump it

Just being able to recover from the opposing spike, Cory Knutsen positions himself for the bump. Junior Erik Montel followed the pass with a classic spike.

Improving year by year

Victories remained few and far between, but a touney win snapped a long streak

Maybe all the team needed was a fresh start with more than half of the team moving up from the guidance of coach Mike Frazier at the junior varsity level and stepping into a new atmosphere. The team looked great with an opening win against LaCrosse right off the bat in the season-opening VolleyCat Tourney. Then things came to a screeching halt.

Momentum, however, deserted the squad as they struggled again after the lone win. Inconsistent play frustrated the Wildcats as they played well against some tough opponents, but let down against others. Still, no matter what else happened, the team snapped a streak of over 20 losses with their win, which was one more than the previous year.

Putting in a good word

When it came to offense there was one player who stood above the rest of the team. Keith Buikema was a force despite the boys' record. On the defensive side, Erik Mantel was a 5'10" junior who stood 6'6" when he wanted to block some of the hardest hitters in the conference. Senior Nick Medrano was a pleasant surprise, having just one year of experience on the JV level. Under the watchful eye of Coach Frazier he developed into an offensive and defensive threat as he entered his only varsity year.

Cooch Mike Frozier stresses the importance of proper defensive positioning during a time out of the VolleyCot Tourney. It was the first match ever for many of the players, who were challenged to learn the game in just a few weeks.

anxious assistance

Assisting with the stots, Amber Westerhoff helps by tracking timeouts and substitutions during the game. By the look on her face, it was pretty obvious the action was heated of the JV PCC Tourney, which Kouts eventually won.

early riser

Although starting his approach a little too soon, Doug Bilinski still manages to spike the ball deep into LoCrosse's back row. According to Cooch Frozier, His quickness and athleticism made him one of the Wildcat's strongest offensive threats.

in wynch

As he spikes the ball, Dave Plaetz seals the game against LaCrosse. Meanwhile setter Billy Rickey runs into spike coverage position behind Dave in case LaCrosse manages to block the ball.

Reaching out, Adam Suarez and Jeff Johnson extend a double block to seal off the Wildcat's court. Although it wasn't the most glamorous skill, blocking required excellent timing and strong vertical leap ability. The result was a properly executed kill-block.

The all-rookie challenge

JV continues a long-term rebuilding process and even finds a little success

Junior varsity coaches know that every year is a "rebuilding" year, but it is still unusual to begin with no experience at all. That's what happened with Coach Mike Frazier's Wildcats, though. Most were freshmen and some were first-year sophomores. Without any feeder program, everyone was starting from scratch. The teams' key players were all new, but performed well. Jeremy Spencer, Billy Rickey, and Doug Bilinski were among those players.

Saving the best for last

In the last regular season match of the year, the JV finally reached its potential in an epic three-game battle. Unfortunately, it was against Hebron, one of the strongest teams in the conference. "There is history between these two schools," Coach Frazier said. "Win or lose, it's always a tough match and our guys played as well as they possibly could."

I can't get no satisfaction

Most of the losses were close, but Coach Frazier said he still wasn't satisfied with the season. "Out of 10 matches, we won two. Seven of those matches went three games. We were just that close. You have to have skills in every facet of this game and there is a lot for everyone to learn in a very short amount of time. This is a big disadvantage for new players, but experience changes everything. Our program is improving."

Coach Thompson keeps focus on basics, team play, and JV's winning traditions

Junior Varsity Girls' Volleyball Coach Ann Thompson has coached the team for a long time. Twenty-three years to be exact. According to the veteran coach, "Volleyball is a team sport with all members being equally important in the role they play. Hitters hit, defensive specialists play defense, and setters set." It is a strategy that has served her teams well, including this one.

Girls earn second-place at PCC

Going into the PCC tourney with a 5-9 record, the JV girls were not sure if they were capable of defeating a solid Washington Township team. Fortunately, the Lady Wildcats succeeded in beating the Lady Senators and went on to the semifinals. They turned in a strong performance against Kouts in the match and won again. In the finals, however, the girls were knocked into second place by Boone Grove, which won a close 15-11, 15-9, match.

"We went to the PCC tourney and no one believed we could win two matches and make it into the finals," Coach Thompson noted. "The feeling that after a year of working at doing the right thing had paid off, was wonderful."

It's a good thing that Toni Sheehy is ready deep in the court. A strang serve from Washington Twp. was easily handled by the junior to set up the offense.

Smooth operators

Moniak complements a scrappy team in a wild season of mixed results

When times looked tough there was one player that the girls could be sure would come through. Junior Julie Moniak was dominant on the court all year long. When the season was over, Julie was honored with the Most Valuable Player award and Best Offense award. She wasn't the only player, though. It took an entire operation to play the way these girls did, who ended their season with winning records against both PCC and non-conference opponents.

heart stoppers

The greatest heartbreak was losing to Boone Grove in the sectional finals after easily beating them earlier in the season. The Lady Wildcats advanced to the championship game by defeating arch-rival Wheeler, but couldn't keep the momentum going. Hanover won the first game of the match against Boone, but lost games two and three, ending their chance to repeat as sectional champs.

on and off the court

The girls were not only talented on the court, but off of the court as well. Brienne Sheehy was named Cedar Lake Junior Miss Contest and active in National Honor Society. Julie Moniak also was active in the honor society and Key Club. Most of the team was involved in school and community activities off the court and juggled minimal free time with studies and extracurricular activities.

Reacting to an ace by Hanover's server, Adrienne Shroko, Jamie Jenkins, and Jill Kienzie watch with excitement from the bench. The key to serving an ace was watching for weak spots in the opponent's positioning and being able to hit that spot with a solid serve.

Spirit with a smile

Positive outlook engages home crowds during the long winter months

Beginning every cheer with the attitude, "We can do it," the cheerleaders attempted to drive the crowd into a winning frenzy. Although the cheers looked like all fun and games on the court, it actually took hours of fine-tuning. Two-hour practices after school was the norm. One result: senior Adam Walker dazzled the crowd with his countless flips across the gym, drawing stares of disbelief from opposing cheerleaders who could not believe a male was out-performing them.

The 'dry' run

When you thought of a manager, a mean, nasty person might have come to mind. But when the cheerleaders thought of a manager, they remembered Ashley Drysdale. Managing the cheerleading squad wasn't easy. "Being manager is really fun 'cause I get to hang out with some of my friends and get a letter for it," Ashley said.

The early birds

When it came to dedication, the Poms knew the meaning all too well. Waking up with the birds, the squad practiced at 6:30 a.m.—an hour and a half before school. Although they disliked the schedule, most agreed it did help them learn the routines. "I don't mind having practice in the morning and afternoon," Carrie Talbert noted, "as long as it's not like every morning for two weeks."

An opponent from Boone Grove tries to turn over sophomore Nick Ureno. Boone Grove won the first meeting between the teams, 21-48, but the Wildcats edged closer in the rematch, 30-48.

huddle up, men

The wrestling team huddles during the recess at the Crown Point Sectionals. Coach Szonyi gave the squad a little pep talk and revved them up, leading to improved performances on the mat.

muscle man

With his teammates on the sidelines cheering him on, Jon Howe gets pumped. The team gave him the nickname, "Crazy," because when he wrestled, he looked like a crazy man.

What's in a name?

It wasn't exactly the WWF, but domination was still the goal for every last man

Diving from the turnbuckle. Hitting their opponents over the head with folding chairs. Fighting in the audience. Obnoxious announcers. The wrestling matches were anything but this, but making a name for oneself on the mat was a badge of honor.

Focused on a super season

Junior Jon Howe hustled to a 32-5 personal record and a weight class championship at the North Newton Invite. This was no surprise though, given Howe's love for the sport. On his marked improvement, Howe said, "I trained a lot harder than I ever have before. My intensity and focus was all on creating a better team . . . and stepping up to lead the team."

Hungry for a wolf

Freshman Brian Gley had a lot of nerve as a rookie. Gley said his most memorable match was when he took on an opponent from Boone Grove who had a 65-pound weight advantage. Why? He was the only person who wanted to take on the Boone Grove Wolf. The result? Gley stepped up and won with a pin. Who's howling now?

Rising above the gutter

First bowling season a little hard to pin down

This was the inaugural year for Hanover Central bowling as a sport and it was the second year for the Indiana High School Bowling Conference. The Hanover boys' and girls' teams were made up of bowlers who never really were on a real team before and it certainly was a wake-up call for both squads. They showed their dedication throughout the season and their scores showed it at the end.

"I really had a great time with the team and I wished that the season could have lasted longer," senior Amanda Luce said.

Oh, what a day!

At sectionals, sophomore Lynn Savikas tripled her league average of 69 to bowl a 545 series enroute to earning her a bid to Regionals in Mishawaka. Stephanie Roedel also earned an alternate spot for regionals.

The Reh Bowlers

Each of the bowling teams had one bowler who had been bowling in the Indiana State Youth American Bowling Alliance program at Stardust III in Dyer and each led their teams respectively. Christopher Reh made it to the Finals of the Masters and Queens Tourney in 1999, Indiana-Kentucky All-Stars team also in 1999, and the State Finals of the Coca-Cola Tourney in 2001. Krystle Reh made it all the way to the State Finals of the Coca-Cola Tourney in 2000, but fell short of going to Nationals.

Learning along the way

Winning just six games may seem like a small task, but a win is a win

Starting the season off with a loss hit the team hard, but when they came back and won the next two that brought their morale up. Winning six of their 19 games, the JV team proved they could record a few W's in the scorebook. Homecoming brought PCC rival Hebron to town, but the Hawks had to return home sulking over a 35-30 loss. It was always a good feeling to win a game at home, and four of their six wins took place in the Wildcat Den.

In the lane, Nick Ryan gives Adam Miller some room for an easy layup against Morgan Twp. Unfortunately for the Wildcats, the PCC-rival Cherakees were just too strong as they took a 12-point win.

Overtime or waste of time

Overtime games were crowd pleasers, they gave life back to the team that needed it and they just had to take advantage of the opportunity. With four overtime games strewn about the schedule the 'Cats played even harder. Unfortunately, Hanover did not win any of the overtime games. While it hurt to lose, learning to compete in tight games was necessary in preparing to play at a varsity level.

Practice, practice, practice

In addition to playing for the fun of it, freshman and JV players needed to know more about the game. Mistakes could always be fixed with practice. The teams practiced plays over and over again until they saw it in their sleep, hopefully to be executed in a game situation. Practice wasn't necessarily everything to a team, but they wouldn't have been anywhere without it.

Sitting on the bench and unable to be on the floor only described half the feelings running through the varsity players' minds, especially as the Morgan Twp. game slipped through Hanaver's fingers.

An unb-weave-able season

New coach Ociepkka brings 'the weave,' but the varsity season still unravels

Even though new head coach Bill Ociepkka brought an outstanding resume, victory escaped the varsity. With former coach Larry Govert moving over to coach the girls' varsity, "Coach O," as his players called him, set sail in youthful waters. A late addition after former Hanover coach Terry Strawbridge resigned before the season even started, Ociepkka had to play catch-up from the start. Unfortunately, so did the team.

As the year went on and the guys couldn't seem to clutch a win, Coach Ociepkka put in a slow down offense called "The Weave." Fans and other coaches either hated or liked the strategy. Although few recognized the purpose, the intent was to stay close in the games. Still, team members played their hearts out and lost big—but came close to winning twice late in the season.

Pumpin' it up

With only three seniors on the team, underclassmen picked up valuable experience. Mike Wick, Nick Medrano, and Chris Mantel returned after playing just a few minutes on the previous year's varsity team and contributed tremendously with the three averaging 20 points a game.

Even though Roger Niemeyer only played half the year, he seemed to be a big part of the team. He kept everyone's spirits up in the locker room despite the score.

"He always helped us to keep are head up and get ready for the next half," Wick said. He was missed the rest of the year.

Senior Nick Medrano tries to tie the game with a free throw. Although most games were not tied very often, the boys and the fans never gave up. The gym was packed even at the final home game.

Staying on track

Young coach leads young squad to a winning record

When the name Chris York was mentioned, track and geography typically came to mind. But with an opening in the coaching staff, the former Hanover student took on a new role—coach of the girls' junior varsity basketball team.

"I wanted another chance to work with (varsity coach) Govert," Coach York said, "we work well together." Leading the girls to an 11-9 season, the new coach hardly looked like a rookie. He had a secret weapon, though. "Mr. York's leather pants really inspired us!" Jacinda James commented.

Dealing with another kind of loss

However tough it may have been, the girls had to overcome the huge loss of Lindsey Parks. Their way of remembering: wristbands with her number, 21, and a black strap on their jerseys. "The whole thing was devastating and hard, especially when you realize that you grew up playing basketball with Lindsey," Jillian McElmurry said. Team members coped in different ways. Some remained quiet, while others were open and eager to communicate, but they all missed her deeply.

They're all important, but ...

Most of the girls said there was no single important game, all of them were important. But a special moment? "(It was) the fact that we made it to the PCC tourney championship," Jacinda James said.

New season, new coach

After seven years as head coach of the boys' varsity team and turning down a job as assistant coach at Calumet High School, Larry Govert took on his first season as coach of the varsity girls' basketball team. And even with a new coach, the team had a relatively good season with a 13-7 record.

Walking wounded

The Lady Wildcats had to deal with their share of injuries over the season, one of which was team captain Kelly Garrett's, seriously sprained ankle. Other injuries included Julie Moniak straining her Achilles tendon and Katie Meyer having surgery done to her knee. Sophomore Sarah Csikos also experienced asthma problems, but there was no complaining and they didn't use the health problems as an excuse.

No three-peat here

Despite the Lady Wildcats' good season, they didn't continue their reign as sectional champs. After beating Wheeler in the first round and reaching the final round after defeating Boone Grove, the girls were put up against the Hebron Lady Hawks. Hebron was more than prepared for the game, surging past Hanover for a 51-29 victory.

Seeing the (River) Forest for the trees, these drivers really knew their woods.

With six returning golfers on the roster, coach Scott Campbell's hopes of a successful golf team were bolstered. The addition of several new faces put his goal just a few strokes away. With an opening match win over River Forest, the squad stayed competitive all year. Even freshman Jason Metz was able to play an essential role in the team's success. "I thought the golf team did very well," Metz commented.

A 'four'ce to reckon with

In their season opener, Hanover found the home Monastery course to their liking as they easily defeated River Forest, 182-208. Bryan Brightwell led the team with a 43 on the front nine, par 36 course. Mike Stamate and Adam Miller followed with 45s, and Eric Yukon rounded out the field with a 49. All four finished ahead of the Ingot's top finisher, who carded a 50.

Like kissing your sister

Team scores usually included only the first four players' rounds, but after Hanover and Rensselaer were tied at the end of their match, the fifth-man score kicked in. The Bombers' Mike Asbell carded a 50, while Eric Yukon was one stroke back at 51. The difference gave Rensselaer the win, though the official score for the match was 174-174. Bryan Brightwell led all golfers with a 38 on the par 36 Monastery course. Mike Stamate and Adam Miller each scored 44, while Erik Mantel finished with a 48.

pull, push, throw

As senior Shannan McLaughlin warms up to throw in the shot put, she sets herself in position and checks her form. A combination of speed and "putting" from near the head were key to good throws.

Strategy stretch

While getting ready for their events, senior Megan Vassar, sophomore Jacinda James, and freshman Katie Burke talk a little strategy for keeping the Hanover Relays tight.

A perfect 10, plus one

For eleven years the Lady Wildcats remained perfect in PCC track. They still are.

Ain't no mountain high enough

No matter what obstacle stood in their way, the girls raced over every PCC opponent to become champions again. Some of the conference meets were a little closer this time, but this team was determined to keep the streak alive.

Despite losing a key distance runner, Kelly Garrett, to softball, the Lady Wildcats found success in other areas, especially Sarah Csikos in the hurdles. Senior Shannon McLaughlin also left her mark.

Wonder woman

McLaughlin earned All-PCC honors in shot put and discus by claiming both titles in the PCC Meet. She dominated almost every opponent she faced. "I knew coming into the year that this was going to be my year to do it in and luckily for me it was," she said. He luck continued until sectionals when she fell just short of advancing to regionals.

Another streak continues

In addition to the PCC streak, the Lady Wildcats helped keep the Hanover Relays crown at home for the sixth straight year. Scores for the event were combined with the boys' results to determine the team champion.

Everyone was even at the starting line, but getting to the finish was not so easy.

Working out in the weight room or outside on a cold, windy track was a given for those who ran track. Tired legs, sore muscles, and strained body parts were a common. The discomfort, however, was a small price to pay when finishing first at the finish line.

a surprise second

Even though they did not place first in the PCC meet, second was better than some expected. Chris Mantel came through with first place wins in the 400-m dash, and was on the 1600-m relay team along with Jon Howe, Adam Itczak, and Keith Buikema. Both the 400 and 1600 were meet records and the runners were awarded All-PCC honors for their victories.

Strong on the home field

Hosting the Hanover Relays proved to be prosperous for the Wildcats. Taking first with a score of 127, they overwhelmed Boone Grove, Hebron, River Forest, and Lake Station. During the Sprint Medley a fight broke out—a fight for first place between Rich Dobin and River Forest's Rafeale Price. Hanover lost the race by just 1.4 seconds, but pounded the Ingots in the meet.

all smiles for the ladies

Senior Michelle Barger tosses a ball to Coach Kienzie after warming up. She usually threw it when no one was looking and in fun may have wanted to hit one of the coaches. Michelle was a great defensive help at third base and an offense turned in a solid .250 batting average.

sliding to safety

With senior Kelly Garrett the fastest player on the team, the Wildcats encouraged her to steal bases as she did sliding in just in time at third. Kelly was a huge help to the team, which was grateful that she didn't run track this season as she did in past years.

bunting forward

Setting up for a bunt to help move a teammate from first to second is senior Brienne Sheehy. The Lady Wildcats used this strategy often during the year in manufacturing some runs.

slapping the competition

Cassie Freeman (bottom photo) is good at placing the ball where it was hard for the defense to throw out the runner moving from first to second. A slap bunt was usually helpful when one of the faster girls used to get a nice roll and beat out the throw to first.

strike three

"Strike three!" was a familiar sound for pitcher Beth Wendlinger who ended the season striking out 343 batters. She also did not give up an earned run until the last regular season game against Whiting, but the Lady Wildcats still won the game.

A dominant force

Wendlinger leads the way to a sixth-ranked season with stellar pitching

The Lady Wildcats worked hard all year, losing only three games. They were ranked in the Post Tribune and Times Top 10 all season. They also were ranked sixth (2A) in the state. The girls proved they had what it took to compete with the best. Even though Beth Wendlinger pitched several no-hitters, perfection was still a grasp away.

Eleventh inning stretch leads to PCC title

After two long days of hard competition the Lady Wildcats came out on top in the PCC tourney. It was a cold day from the start, but the girls proved in the snow storm at Wheeler that nothing could stop them from being champions. With a scoreless game through 11 innings, the Lady Wildcats proved that if you believe, miracles do happen. The team brought home the title after beating Boone Grove, 1-0, with some hard work and dedication in 11 innings.

The one that got away

When Hanover drew the bye for sectionals, local powerhouse Andean got off the hook from facing the Lady Wildcats. Still, it was still a sectional to remember. After beating Bishop Noll 2-0 in the second round, Hanover fought the Griffith Panthers for the championship. After scoring two runs in the first inning, momentum favored Hanover. But Griffith fired back in the sixth inning with four runs to take and keep a 4-2 lead. Despite the loss, the Lady Wildcats took pride in their 29-3 season and their PCC Tourney and round-robin championships.

After losing many players from last season or the fact that they did not want to play again forced junior varsity baseball coach Mike Steele to start from scratch. "We started out the year 2-1, but tough teams and poor fielding led to seven losses in a row," he said. "Inclement weather forced us to miss out on quite a few games. The kids stuck with it and played for most of the season."

new and improved

Always a challenge, Coach Kienzie was the man chosen for the task of creating a winning ju girls' softball team. The team jelled and won many games, some impressively. Amanda Schau noted her favorite moment was "when I pitched against Rensselaer and slaughtered them, 30-3."

nine went out, eight came back

When the ju baseball team was getting slaughtered by Morton, both physically and mentally, it was time for a switch. Taking everyone out with the exception of pitcher Aaron Boileau, Coach Steele replaced the other eight fielders. "I thought coach Steele should have taken only the players that were making mistakes out, rather than the players that were playing a decent game," Danny Kozlowski said. "On the other hand, the guys that went in closed the game out strong."

swing and a miss

Dan Kozlowski tries to catch up with a fast ball, but fouls it back. The freshman hung tough with the pitcher and eventually walked.

Climbing a mountain

The boys' varsity baseball team improved by three wins over the previous year, in spite of facing some state-ranked opponents. PCC rivals Washington Twp. and Boone Grove both rated among the best in class. Given a history of tough seasons, this one turned out fairly well. "We played good together. We came together and worked as a team to put some wins under our belt," team veteran Dave Guzaski commented.

Worse than the curse

When the Wildcats started having trouble at the plate, they borrowed a little trick from Hollywood. "After a three-game hitting slump, the baseball [team] gathered all their bats at home plate and, as was in the movie 'Major League,' attempted to remove the curse using fried chicken, Mountain Dew, and bubble gum cigars," coach Ron Szanyi said. "It didn't work."

coming back for more

Although the season is over, Toni Sheehy said she likes to get back into the swing of things during the summer. "I am out of practice, but it will all come back to me."

racket roles

"Mr. Whitacre was always trying to teach us to do this swoop thing with the racket," Julie Moniak said. "I try to be as good at playing tennis, but he is just too good."

in with the best

Now that she has had more practice, Toni Sheehy can start the next season with the feeling that she can rise to the top. She won most of her matches during the season, but said she is shooting for an even better season next year.

a smashing serve

Julie Moniak practices with friends after school on a sunny summer day. Her furious serves could intimidate anyone on the receiving end off the court.

Coach Greg Whitacre's girls' varsity tennis team edged above a .500 season with some talent and treats. Although the team lost at sectionals to Griffith, 2-3, there was one sweet spot. "Julie Moniak, who had a winning record at number one singles, advanced to regionals by winning qualifying matches against other sectional number ones," Coach Whitacre explained, "but her season ended with a 2-6, 4-6, loss to a Lowell girl who went downstate."

fun, music, and milkshakes

During one of the games, Coach Whitacre told the girls that if at any point in the match they could hit the opposing girl with the ball he would buy them ice cream. Most of the opposing teams managed to dodge or return the incoming balls, but there were a few girls slow on their feet and went home with a bruise. The Lady Wildcats went home with milkshakes and jammin' to tunes.

attitude reflects leadership

The junior varsity tennis team had a terrific season, Coach Whitacre noted, winning many of their games. Amanda Huffman along with Miranda Spindler were key influences. Both were also given the opportunity to play at the varsity level. The team, working together, had a wonderful season with lots of improvement.

Count on Us

There was strength in numbers, but who could you really count on among the 466 students and 70 faculty and staff members? Day-to-day and week-to-week, we learned how similar, yet different we were. But when things really mattered, everyone could always count on someone being there just for you.

YOU CAN ALWAYS COUNT ON ASHLEY

Drysdale and Danielle Eiermann to be at the JV and varsity baseball games. Since they had friends on both teams, they were dedicated to seeing them play on the field as often as they could.

Good Bye

Copy: Dave Guzaski • Photos: KEY Archives • Layout: Dave Guzaski

In a year riddled with misfortune, 14-year teacher Barbara Williams passed away December 3.

"My aunt was a strong person who fought long and hard to survive. She influenced hundreds of kids through the years of teaching. She will be missed very much at school and in my family. We love you Aunt Barb," Kristy Brownd said.

In 1995, she was named Teacher of the Year and more recently was named to the "Who's Who Among American Teachers." Junior Danielle Eiermann had Mrs. Williams her sophomore year and said, "She was a good teacher and inspired me to stay in math class." At Hanover she was of chairman for the math department, a class sponsor, coach for the Math Academic Bowl, and spent many extra hours tutoring students.

Lending a helping hand

Needing a little extra help, former student Mike Kil asks Mrs. Barbara Williams for some expert advice with those dreaded quadratic equations. Mike was one of many students benefitting from her dedication.

If you had something that you wanted to add to those agenda books, you would have taken it up with the school board—the new school board, that is. In spring of 2000, the school board elections were held. And in one of the largest turnovers in recent memory, three new board members were elected to office.

"I believe they are doing the best they can for the students, which is what matters," principal Joseph Fetty said, "and over the next four years they will serve the school well." With the power to run the district and create school policies, the board was ready for action.

How would you feel as a freshman and having a lot of responsibilities? Ryan May faced that daily. Active with the Key Club, he helped with some of the fundraisers such as the kiddie carnival in the fall. "We donated all the money that we made from the carnival to Bryan Martin," Ryan noted. Martin attended school until seizures prevented him from continuing.

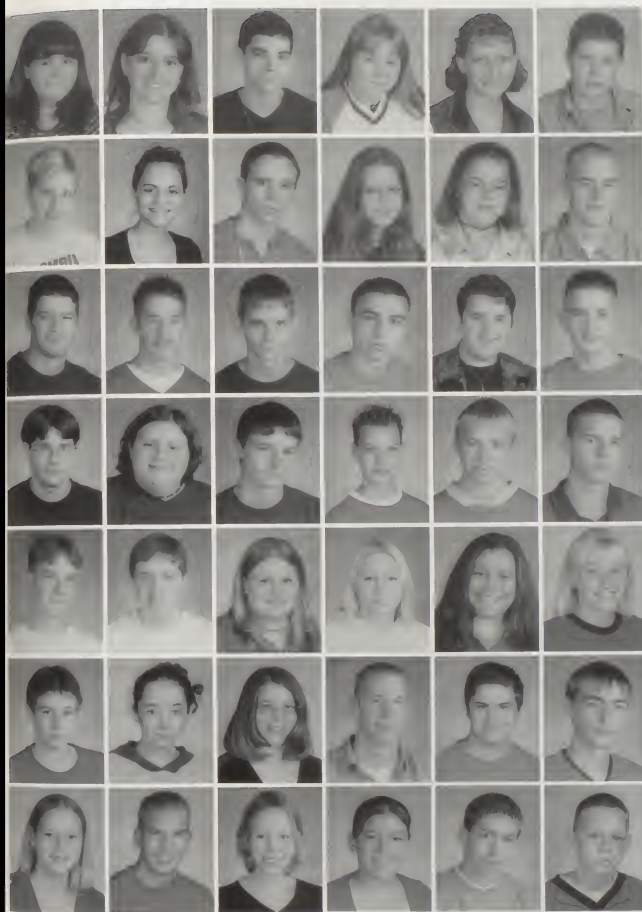

During Christmas break, May helped Holy Name Church deliver poinsettias to elderly people and shut-ins. "Also during the break, Charlie Sears and a few other members went out caroling," Ryan said. His selfless attitude and caring spirit no doubt put a song in everyone's heart.

In Loving Memory

When the year started, everything seemed like it was perfectly planned out and it was going to be a great year for everyone until November 24. A train crash took the lives of Lindsey Parks and her mother, Deborah.

An active freshman, Lindsey was a member of the girls' basketball team, golf team, show choir, and student council. She was very dear to students, faculty and staff. Everyone who knew the family will always remember them. Even during Spirit Week Lindsey was remembered as friends decorated her locker in her honor, making the week of fun and laughter bittersweet.

Way to go, girl!

Every morning Jen Montgomery took a few laps in the pool. But it was more than a pleasure swim, it was for the team—the whole team. Jen was Hanover's only swimmer, but IHSAA rules allowed her to represent the school regardless of team size.

"It's a lot of hard work and very tiring," Jen said. "I wake up early in the morning, I have swim practice (at Lake Central), then I go home for a shower, and off to school I go." Even with homework to do, she had swim practice after school, too. The talented sophomore was one of the region's top swimmers who hoped to earn a state title before graduating. She continued the tradition set by her brother, Heath, who also made up Hanover's entire swim team a few years ago.

a little support

Sophomore Nicole Pempek supports a towel-wrapped Jen Montgomery at one of her swim meets. "Not many people came to my meets to support me," Jen said.

"We got to talk and chill with people we haven't seen all summer." Jon did some awesome moves and felt comfortable to let everyone see them.

Being 18, a junior, and pregnant, Brigitte Middleton pushed her way through the hallways. She didn't care if she was pregnant or not, she was determined to go to school and make the grades. She lived with her boyfriend, David Jackson, in their own house. She had a baby shower on Sunday, March 18, and her due date was Friday, April 6. "Whatever you do, don't get pregnant. It's really hard and it's just the beginning," Brigitte said about being pregnant. Perhaps the easiest part was choosing a name, Joseph Anthony. Brigitte's mother, Vivian Karen Middleton, was supportive of her daughter's decision to remain in high school during the pregnancy. "I'm by her side 100 percent and I love you to death," she said.

young and younger

Hey, Mr. DJ

Copy: Andrea Stam-Burandt • Photos: Andrew Couwenhoven

It was the beginning of his seventh grade year and the DJ was missing for the seventh grade dance. It was Joe Ponziano's chance to show everyone the magic that he had. Ponziano started his DJ business with a good friend, Chris Clause, in the seventh grade. His teacher, Mrs. Wendy Obrenski, jump-started his career by asking him if he would act as DJ for the dance and, of course, he jumped at the chance.

"It has always been my dream to be a famous DJ and this is my chance to show everybody that I can do it," Joe said. He got his equipment from his dad's good friend who owned a very large DJ company in northern Illinois. "From there on out I was on a very upward battle for the DJ position that I always wanted—to own my own business. Now I'm buying out two major DJ companies, Party Time DJ Service and Spectrum DJ Service," Ponziano said.

Ponziano DJed Homecoming believing it would be a good way to get his name out and hear his style. It didn't turn out quite the way he wanted. He said he was disappointed there was only two hours to take pictures and dance, and that most people couldn't dance because of the long line for pictures. Most of all it was right after the game and most people didn't have time to shower and pamper. Still, it was another chance to show his talents and spread the word.

the music man

With a history of making music, Joe Ponziano entertained his own troops at Homecoming. In addition to the DJ business, he also expressed interest in starting an Internet radio station after attending a field trip to the Illinois Center for Broadcasting with the CyberCot staff.

Going up; growing up

Copy: Andrea Stam-Burandt • Photos: Andrew Covenhoven

What would you do as a junior getting ready to become a senior within a couple of months? Junior Josh Pagel was typical of many students in this situation. Never at a loss for words, Josh explained his routine.

"I like to play sports like basketball and football with my friends," he said. He also liked to hang out with friends, chat on the Internet, workout, and, of course, look at the girls that passed by.

As an up-coming senior, Josh gave some advice to tell the up-coming freshmen: "Work hard—it pays off, always keep ya head up, have fun while you can cuz it goes by REAL fast." He added that he made up his mind to go into the Air Force and then go to Indiana University after that, but for now he's trying to get through the year with good grades and lots of friends.

let's figure it out

Do you think you're ready for the real world? Junior Josh Pagel sees how well prepared he is as he makes his way through the Reality Store. The program involved bringing in actual businesses and giving students budget, family, and real-world incidents to see if they could cope with the financial pressures.

senior spirit

A popular presence at every basketball game, senior Charlie Sears entertained children of all ages as the school mascot.

senior siblings

Some of the most fun-filled days of the year are when the students in Child Development invite pre-school bothers and sisters or neighborhood kids to join them. The celebrations made for precious moments. While the seniors and kids interacted patiently before the Halloween candy appeared, there was soon plenty of sugar-induced energy to go around.

0 Counting the CHANGE

Change is good. Whether it was a new facade, new faces at the check-out, or new dollar coins in pocket change, local businesses and groups helped us keep a fresh perspective on the community. Their generosity and support also helped pay us the bills, including nearly half the cost of the yearbook. Even before it was all added up, it was one change we could count on.

COUNTING THEIR CHANGE, students could usually scrape together a few coins for a quick snack from the vending machines. Stocked by CL Vending, proceeds from the sales went for school projects and needs.

8

CHANGING OF SEASONS Spring, along with LesLee Kaper and Kelly Garrett, bring fresh flowers to life. LesLee's parents, Charlie and Marilyn, own and operate Cedar Lake Florists and the Added Touch Gift Shop, "One of Northwest Indiana's Finest."

National Merit Finalist

Hanover Central is proud of you!

Tim was named a National Merit Finalist, an award given to seniors who rank the highest in the country with the combination of their PSAT and SAT scores. He was named a National Merit Semi-Finalist last year based on the rank of his PSAT score. Only one student of every 1600 juniors taking the PSAT achieved this honor. Schotke's PSAT score was 1420 out of a possible 1600. After taking the SAT, Tim was named a 2001 finalist.

with so much to recount, we wouldn't burst your bubble

More memories than bubbles in bathwater came flowing back as the school year ended. It was easy to recount struggling through a physics exam, passing the ISTEP+ test for graduation, and selling Krispy Kreme doughnuts to raise money for honor society. Spirit Week flooded our brains with emotion and noise, not to mention a huge break for the seniors (and literally for Tony Braner). Snow, then cold, heralded the onset of homecoming and didn't leave until May. That didn't stop the girls' softball and track teams from capturing PCC championships, or Mr. Joyce's new Mustang from being totalled in front of the school on a teacher in-service day. (He wasn't seriously injured.) Juniors and seniors created romantic memories at prom, and the softball team caught a lucky rain delay at sectionals which enabled them to attend on time. Of course, saying goodbye to Lindsey Parks and Mrs. Williams was hard. Mr. Rajchel "graduated" into retirement, though he did burst a few bubbles when he announced he would be back to substitute – and share a few memories of his own. Thanks for a great career and a wonderful year.

It wasn't all tears as graduation comes to a close. Becky Scherer and Gretchen Govert had one more chance to recount their memories when the seniors had to return the next day to pick up their diplomas.

COUNTING STEPS in each of his events was important to Eddie Roberts, who also ran in the hurdle events and high jumped for the track team. He undoubtedly recalls this day as the Wildcats repeated as Hanover Relays champs.

LOCAL KIDS interacting with students in Jean Kirk's Child Development class had better keep count of their animal crackers to make sure Rachel Farrell and Brigetta Middleton don't get their fingers on them.

The Election

After five weeks of hand recounts, court appeals, concessions and retractions, Vice President Al Gore's final concession of the presidency to Texas Governor George W. Bush and his vice presidential running mate Dick Cheney brought an end to one of the longest and most eventful elections in American history.

What happened? The Election at a Glance:

November 7 (Election Day): Shortly before 8 p.m. EST, the major television networks estimate Al Gore and vice-presidential running mate Joe Lieberman the winners.

With a too-close-to-call election throughout much of the nation, Florida becomes the key state in deciding the winner, as the next president will need Florida's 25 electoral votes to win.

November 8: At 2:15 a.m., results from Florida begin to suggest George Bush carries the battleground state. Gore concedes the election to Bush, thinking Bush has at least a 50,000 vote lead. Forty-five minutes later, Gore gets word Bush's lead has shrunk to only a few thousand votes, and retracts his concession.

Due to the closeness of the election, the focus turns to questionable ballots and fair voting practices.

In St. Louis, Mo., a controversy arises over a lower court's ruling to keep the polls open past the 7 p.m. deadline.

In Palm Beach County, Fla., an unexpectedly large number of votes for Reform Party candidate Pat Buchanan lead to questions about the legitimacy of the punch-card-style "butterfly ballot."

November 9: Gore's team requests a hand recount of ballots in four Florida counties, Palm Beach, Miami-Dade, Broward and Volusia.

November 16: Bush's lawyers submit written arguments to the U.S. Federal Appeals Court to end recounts.

November 22-December 8: Hand recounts and legal battles continue, making the word "chad" (the small piece of paper punched out of the ballots) a household word.

December 9: The U.S. Supreme Court halts the manual recounts and sets a hearing for two days later.

December 13: In a public concession speech, Gore states he no longer wishes to prolong the election, and yields the presidency, making George W. Bush the nation's 43rd president, and the first chief executive since Benjamin Harrison in 1888 to claim the office with the majority of electoral votes but a minority of the popular vote nationwide.

Elections in Yugoslavia turned angry when Slobodan Milosevic lost to the people's choice Vojislav Kostunica 35 percent to 55 percent. More than 10,000 of the greatest athletes from around the world gathered in Sydney, Australia to participate in the 27th Olympiad. Despite being dubbed "the best ever" by leaders of the International Olympic Committee, a 15-hour time difference between the United States and Australia kept many Americans from watching live as the United States came away with an unprecedented 97 medals.

Spectators beheld a dazzling opening ceremony, including the lighting of the torch by Australian runner (and native Aborigine) Cathy Freeman, who was later overcome with emotion when she won the gold for the women's 400-meter race.

Although the games received the lowest television ratings since 1968, many athletes gave inspirational performances.

United States sprinter Marion Jones fell short of her goal to win five gold medals, but still got the gold in the 100 and 200 meter sprints, and the 4x400 meter relay, as well as the bronze in the long jump and 4x100 meter relay, winning the medals in spite of the distraction of husband and shot put world champion

C.J. Hunter's positive drug test.

Maurice Green, U.S. sprinter, not only took home the gold, but he also retained the title of "World's Fastest Man" after finishing the 100-meter sprint in 9.8 seconds.

In the water, Laura Wilkinson had a surprise victory over a superb Chinese team to move from fifth place to first and win the first U.S. gold in the women's 10-meter platform in 36 years.

Australian swimmer Ian Thorpe, nicknamed "Thorpedo," broke the world record in the men's 400-meter freestyle relay, finishing in 3:13.67.

On the mat, U.S. heavyweight wrestler Rulon Gardner toppled the undefeated Russian wrestling icon Aleksandr Karelin.

Medal-rich swimmer Lenny Krayzelburg and the U.S. men's relay team won the 400-meter medley relay in 3:33:73, lowering the mark of 3:34.84 set by Americans at the 1996 Atlanta Games. It was Krayzelburg's third gold after victories in the 100- and 200-meter backstrokes.
